RFD: The Pro won this debate b/c they showed using superior & specific evidence from the IMF & elsewhere that dev. assist. actually works. As far as terrorism concerned it's a wash because the military aid given before the crisis was not sufficient to stop it which then required more military assistance to quell the failed military assistance aka... a wash so the Pro wins on development impacts.

Too much of the CON case depends on things that WILL happen (military killing terrorists, etc). Vulnerable to PRO asking for proof cause/effect will bear out.

Sadler - Great use of speed. I think you spend too much time on definitions. Have them for reference but you don't need to say all of them. Thank you for asking for a time frame! Great point!

Guo - Great attacks! Thank you for clarifying the time frame thing in crossfire. And you called for exactly the right cards. The only thing I would want from your rebuttal is for you to point out logical fallacies of the other team.

Papakipos - Holy shit that's a lot of big numbers. Slow down so I can write these down. Why does military aid stabilize countries? Have more confidence in crossfire! Amazing Summary! Where were these points before?

Sahoo - Yes, I do see you playing with your hair. WHY is military aid a prerequisite? This is a good argument, but you aren't making it. Your attacks don't make a whole lot of sense. As population increases, there are more mouths to feed, increasing starvation. This does make sense.

RFD - starvation - pro wins - it is an impact right now as well as future terror - pro wins - just pushing around without solving the cause women - con wins - culture does not allow for change, neither side fixes this disease - pro wins - low impact drugs - con wins - pro had no empirical evidence, just extended terror attack

The Neg carries through their main args that went untouched by the Aff. Lee - speak a bit slower - I had a hard time following - and be a bit less aggressive in CX - getting heated ~~and~~ ^{having} your ethos.

So, first, I accepted the ~~CON's~~ ^{PRO's} idea that ~~actors~~ ^{actors} need not be experts in both development assistance and military aid. (The US can choose from a variety of (contractors), each specializing). The issue is that the ~~CON's~~ ^{PRO's} impacts are contingent on them being effective without military aid alongside them. So the ~~PRO~~ ^{PRO} really needs to talk about ~~examples~~ ^{examples} where developmental aid worked despite conflict + the CON needs to provide more evidence of where it failed. Since the ~~CON's~~ ^{CON's} claim of contingency was ~~never~~ ^{never} refuted, I have to go w/ them

This debate was dominated by the Aff. They had neg. on the defense from the first crossfire. Sun/Guo - good debate but don't let them run over you. You got stuck on the one piece of evidence and that cost you the flow and you dropped points. It also got you flustered until you finally called them on it. ^(Both teams) Frameworks were close but not worth taking time on in this debate.

Ziaee/Shen - Really strong debaters but Shen came off so smug it was almost hard for me to give the ballot to Aff. I understand aggressive/assertive but you need some humility. Also you don't ~~have~~ have good eye contact - need work on that (looking up instead). ^{Ziaee - excellent!}

The win came out of dropped points by the Aff. and much stronger impacts by the Aff. ~~Not a hard debate~~ Neg - get your cards in order.

Ethiopian conditions are probably more clandestine and comparable to the Sahel than Columbia, lol.

RFD: Aff was a lot more professional and prepared. Neg had some serious clarity issues. Aside from that, neg was very unresponsive, especially as the round progressed and the aff continually added more and more content. Neg's tenuous grasp of the round forces me to vote aff b/c they control all combatting terr. and creating a bright future while military involvement only makes things worse. Neg also never proves why we need military involvement. Aff does a pretty dope job of explaining how great things are progressing.

The neg set the frame work for the debate and won based on their cases defensibility and evidence it's hard to argue conductive arguments that are also cogent Kelly had a great rebuttal where she gave 3 arguments and linked them to most of their case, but the evidence about the increase of developmental aid's effectiveness when military aid really turned the debate to the neg's side and put the debate within the parameters of their frame work, you should've argued their frame work more and to prove a cost benefit analysis would've been much better. Yes, that was in your first contention but you dropped it and made no effort to refute their frame work

RFD:

I voted for the Aff for 3 reasons:

#1. According to Neg framework, Aff has to prove on balance (equal to or greater) that dev. aid ~~is~~ is preferred over military aid. Thus, I found that Aff said ~~dev aid is~~ lack of dev aid causes conflict which gets to root of problem

2 Solvency

Neg won on long term impacts

3 (Not really voting pt) Con present a bit of a cop out move by saying all pro's evidence points to their side under their slightly abuse framework

Tips:Better lines of questioning for 1st CX, please.

Shibano - great rebuttal but try to tone down a rhetoric a bit.

AFF

Ob. not mutually exclusive

1. Economic and poverty increase right by 50% stable income 25% GDP in capital

2. Health infrastructure - Malaria

3. Clinical transition
Democracy
• stabilizes and promotes lasting peace
• economic development
• Hoover Institute: development

→ balance of the two is needed so prioritization of one over the other is wrong
→ Sudan and coup in Mali have been causing harm

1. Efficacy
• Military aid is effective
• Can't provide a plan

Can fall within the way
Cop-out rebuttal

2. Solvency
• They don't show any long term solvency

CON

Ob. on balance

1. Must coexist

- security is a precondition
- need to improve policies to install diplomacy and conflict resolution

2. Development aid can fail

- benefit insiders
- no way to prevent money for something else
- money aid more corruption
- will benefit populous of unstable state

- contradiction
- lack of demand
- why conflict is there
- increases terrorism
- increases lives
- 1. Est effectiveness
- 2. Solved through development
- 3. Increases human rights abuses

Status Quo still gives problems

Providing a plan can't always prioritize

Solvency

This was a great round.
 In regards to the "2032" card, it was wrong for the neg to say its shown no benefit. A better way to phrase it would have been no clear benefit. The card states 3.6 million got some sort of aid, but for all we know that means some people died and later only received one meal. The card blatantly says humanitarian, which is not development.
 The neg won the affs neg democracy contention. The aff dropped much of the neg case, Peacekeeper and military coup. Looking at long term benefits development does not prevent droughts as were brought up, since its not humanitarian the 3.6 million who were fed not necessarily saved, do not count when weighing because of this the neg wins on the lives, and won most of the other arguments.
 So because of this the Neg wins.

Nipper: Case needs more organization and you need ~~more~~ substantially more eye contact and volume. BE CONFIDENT.

Lawrence: Good, but still more eye contact. Reading off the lap top was awkward in this space, but your case was clear, well-organized, and well-spoken.

Bogar: Develop specific counters for contentions you expect to see. The opponent case was pretty strong, yet I could tell you were speaking off the cuff. Preparation breeds confidence.

Seo: Good rebuttal, but arguments need more description and analysis. I felt like I was hearing the surface, not the meat of your arguments.

Nipper: You only have two minutes you have to launch into the speech and hit right away. Not enough substance and 0 impact calc.

Lawrence: Good grouping, decent argumentation but still lacking proper impact calc. The strength was definitely your clash and ability to cover the whole round, the weakness was creating coherent waters.

BOGAR: Do not give a new definition in grand c-x

BOGAR: Framework was weird and muddled by both teams. Once again, more voters.

Seo: The framework debate was muddled and didn't get either team going. The rest of the PF was good, more "why you'll vote for us."

RFD: Negative team is able to back up, empirically, their claim that counter-terrorism is necessary for long term stability. Affirmative lacks evidence and long term strategies, simply states benefits of developmental assistance.

DO NOT JUDGE ANY TEAM YOU JUDGED IN ROUND 1 or 2

Comments & Reason for Decision:

Ramadoss:
Cont 1) Vaccine

Cont 2) Social Dev.
- lack of education
- disease prevention
- refugee number ↑, showing need for

Bhatti
Monitor your use of "like"

Cont 1) Military aid increases terrorism
- education ↓ extremism

Cont 2) Humanitarian aid is dev. aid
- Sudan: Military aid hindered dev. aid
How? This link was not developed enough

Very thorough argument and debunking of the opponents' contentions

Sweat:

Cont: Security
- Sec. begets dev.
- "Failed states"

- can't balance sec. & dev

Cont 2: Terrorism Efficiency
- random acts of violence
- drug trade

Cont 3: Corruption

Be more aggressive in crossfire

Good use of sources & good speaking demeanor

Matteotti:

Be more prepared; use all of your available time

Cont. 1) Military facilitates dev
- stable infrastructure
Good redirecting in crossfire

Corruption can undermine Dev. statistics

- Not focusing of US military aid
- Humanitarian aid isn't dev. aid

- US democratic corruption??
- If you don't have evidence for this don't
Don't add this in, it is unrelated and won't help you

Strengthen your use of sources and statistics, and utilize all of your available time. There were good points offered but not strongly enough

Comments & Reason for Decision:

This debate was clearly in the hands of the Aff team throughout. The aff team presented logical arguments, very organized, + lots of supporting evidence.

Liam Main points: Food insecurity, Micro financing, MA in the future - mali, - prolong, - state of MA → 1 term Elizabeth The con team had some good arguments in their opening, but it lacked organization, eye contact, succinctness in some points. Evidence was good at this time.

The cross went clearly to the Aff team as the con couldn't support their stunts w/ evidence, didn't ask questions, + conceded points.

Spkr 3, for the Con, did not have well organized thoughts or evidence. Difficult to follow.

Spkr 4, for the Aff, clearly stated the Aff's case, introduced new evidence to support it; countered con's arguments.

Crossfire #2 was like Cross #1; concessions by con, no questions by con.

Summation: Final continued in same manner as above.

Aff team was the clear winner.

Comments & Reason for Decision:

The neg was much better at extending their offense throughout the round & won off of terror & corruption. The aff ended up defending themselves way too much & didn't focus on extending their own arguments enough. Solid round by both teams.

Comments & Reason for Decision:

Russell: great speaker
could have been more clear in constructive

Mazza: ~~was~~ well presented constructive - very strong counter-pts
may want more statistics to compare terrorism in other regions would like more evidence → military aid causes the conflict

* focus on ? & answer in cross

Misra: very clear ~~constructive~~ be careful - no speeches during cross good pt in final focus - also developmental aid in region

Duraiswamy: good job on bringing in corruption in constructive good job on final focus - could have hit their evidence harder

* focus on ? & answer in cross

Comments & Reason for Decision:

Pro did good job making their points and pointing out the lack of evidence for Con's contentions. Pro also seemed better prepared.

Bringing up the Northern Mali conflict would have been a good example for con.

Pro spent a lot of time on female genital mutilation in argument so would have been better to have more information on the subject but statistics showing drop in practice were good.

Elzarka made excellent arguments that were very effective but spoke a little too fast.

Overall great job everyone & keep it up!
